Consider the paper we've read for class today: Rice, M. A., Hobbs, L. E., Wallace, K. J., & Ophir, A. G. \(2017\). Cryptic sexual dimorphism in spatial memory and hippocampal oxytocin receptors in prairie voles \(Microtus oregonus\). Hormones and Behavior 95, 94-102.

Focus on the introduction section of the paper and on a select paragraph within the introduction. For each of these selected paragraphs, write a summary of the paragraph and determine the important points contained in each paragraph. How do you think the paragraph is structured? What is contained within each paragraph (e.g., is there one main point or more? Are each point supported by evidence? How did the authors structure them? How did the paragraph end)

Paragraph 2 (The ecology and life history of a species...)

Paragraph summary:

Points mentioned in the paragraph:

How is the paragraph structured?

Paragraph 4 (Beyond anatomy of the brain, ...)

One sentence summary:

Points mentioned in the paragraph:

How is the paragraph structured?

Paragraph 6 (In this study, ...)

One sentence summary:

Points mentioned in the paragraph:

How is the paragraph structured?

What do you think should be contained within a paragraph? Should a paragraph focus only on one point? Or can we include more than one main point in a paragraph? If yes how should we structure them?
